

Drug use changes brain chemistry in adolescents whose brains are still developing. Addiction is a pediatrically-acquired disease with 90% of addicted Americans beginning use before 18 years of age. This program will include discussions of adolescent drug use patterns with an emphasis on prescription drug use, emerging trends in new drug use, and examples of ways adolescents are now hiding their drugs and paraphernalia in plain sight. Program faculty will also discuss the signs and symptoms that differentiate adolescent use from adult use, along with signs and symptoms that differentiate adolescent use from psychological issues.
