The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates over one million people are living with AIDS in the United States. Approximately 40,000 new cases are diagnosed each year and surprisingly, a quarter do not know they're infected. Family Planning clinics are uniquely suited to help clients understand their HIV status because it provides a setting where they can talk openly about their sexual activity. The CDC is recommending new strategies to make HIV testing a routine part of medical care. As family planning providers, it's crucial we offer these tests to diagnose and treat infections earlier rather than later.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

1. Identify the magnitude of HIV infection by subgroup and geographic area, indicate changes over time in prevalence and incidence of HIV infection.
2. Define "opt out" testing and explain the rationale for using it in a family planning setting.
3. List common AntiRetroViral therapy and identify any contraindications for use with hormonal contraception.
