

WOMEN, MENOPAUSE, AND REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH

Satellite Conference and Live Webcast

Wednesday, May 16, 2012, 2:00-4:00 p.m. (Central Time)
3:00-5:00 p.m. (Eastern) ■ 1:00-3:00 p.m. (Mountain) ■ 12:00-2:00 p.m. (Pacific)

Women often serve as caregivers for their families, putting the needs of their spouses, partners, children, and parents ahead of their own. Women across the life span experience a multitude of different health issues. Supporting their health care needs will help promote and encourage a longer, healthier, and happier life. Program faculty will address reproductive health issues in women of childbearing age to the needs of women who are experiencing menopause.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

1. Address reproductive and preconception health issues in women of childbearing age.
2. Discuss the importance of annual screenings and pap smears for early detection of gender specific cancers.
3. Explain family planning services available to women at Alabama county health departments.
4. Provide a medical perspective on menopausal issues in women.
5. Discuss the physical, emotional, and psychological occurrences during the different stages of menopause.
6. Explain treatment options that are available to assist those who are experiencing menopause.
