WIC Supports Breastfeeding

A major goal of the WIC Program is to improve the nutritional status of infants. Recognizing breast milk as the ideal first food for infants, the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that infants be exclusively breastfed for the first six months, then continue to receive breast milk, in addition to complementary foods, for two years (or longer, as desired). The Alabama WIC Program encourages WIC mothers to choose breastfeeding in the following ways:

- WIC mothers are provided with breastfeeding information and education during pregnancy and throughout each stage of the breastfeeding journey to help them meet their breastfeeding goals.
- WIC mothers have free access to 24/7 breastfeeding and infant feeding support through the Pacify app, which virtually connects mothers with IBCLCs at the press of a button on their smartphone.
- Breastfeeding mothers receive an expanded WIC food package - larger amounts and varieties of foods.
- Breastfeeding mothers are eligible to participate in WIC until their child's first birthday.
- WIC breastfeeding mothers receive personalized breastfeeding support and access to WIC Designated Breastfeeding Experts (DBEs) - IBCLCs and other staff with advanced breastfeeding education and training - to help prevent and/or resolve common breastfeeding problems. All WIC staff receive breastfeeding support training appropriate to their roles and scopes of practice.
- WIC Peer Counselors are available in numerous counties to provide mom- to-mom breastfeeding encouragement and support.
- WIC breastfeeding mothers may be eligible to receive breastfeeding aids, such as breast pumps and other breastfeeding items, to help support the initiation and continuation of breastfeeding.

To expand the "landscape of support for babies and families" envisioned by United States Breastfeeding Committee, Alabama WIC updates the Breastfeeding Resource Guide annually and welcomes submissions from individuals, coalitions, and organizations that provide breastfeeding support services in Alabama.
