

Resources for Sexuality

Female Sexual Dysfunction Online

www.femalesexualdysfunctiononline.org

This comprehensive website is hosted by Baylor University and is an excellent resource for scholarly information, presentation aids, and learning for professionals. The site offers web discussions and free CME modules.

A Guide to Taking a Sexual History

www.cdc.gov/std/see

Booklet by the Centers for Disease Control which is an overview of how to take a sexual history, especially emphasizing STD/HIV risk.

American Association of Sex Counselors, Educators, and Therapists

www.aasect.org

This is a multidisciplinary membership organization of professionals who share an interest in promoting understanding of human sexuality and healthy sexual behavior. Excellent section on ethics, and lists of continuing education opportunities and referral sources.

4 Women

www.4women.gov

A DHHS website for many topics related to women's health. Nice sections on sexuality for women with disabilities, and specific chronic health diagnoses. Downloadable fact sheets that are suitable for patient education.

Planned Parenthood

www.plannedparenthood.org

Comprehensive site with many tools such as continuing education, podcasts, patient resources, and an "Ask Dr. Cullins" section to get answers to specific questions.

University of Wisconsin/Madison

<http://www.cme.wisc.edu/distance/shist/intro.cfm>

This website has a great learning tool for professionals. The site offers four videos of patient-provider interactions around taking a sexual history. You watch the videos, critique the process, and then read the instructors' comments. Wonderful way to actually see do's and don'ts.
